Representative Alan Mollohan (D-W.Va.)

"Getting an early read on any eye or vision problem is so important for a child's health and development", said Rep. Alan Mollohan (D-W.Va.). "I encourage all parents of a six to twelve month-old infant to take advantage of this opportunity."

Representative Shelley Moore Capito (R-W.Va.)

"Early detection and treatment of vision problems is incredibly important for our young people," said Rep. Shelley Moore Capito (R-W.Va.). "By preventing and addressing potential challenges, we can breakdown vision-related educational burdens and better prepare our students for success. I applaud the work of the InfantSEE® program and encourage parents throughout our state to make healthy vision a priority for their children."

Representative Nick J. Rahall, II (D-W.Va.)

"As a father and grandfather, I know how important the health of our children can be, especially when the cost and access to healthcare becomes an obstacle," said Rep. Nick J. Rahall, II (D-W.Va.). "The free eye and vision screenings provided at the VSP InfantSEE® Mobile Clinic around the state help to fill a medical need in West Virginia for our smallest citizens."
